SANDRA SULLY'S NEW HOME ON TEN NEWS AT FIVE

Network Ten is pleased to announce Sandra Sully will join Bill Woods as the new co-anchor of Sydney's Ten News at Five bulletin, from Monday October 3.

In line with Sandra making this move, TEN's long running Late News will air its final bulletin on Friday September 30.

Ten News at Five is the premier news program in TEN's broadcast schedule, and as one of Australia's most respected and credible journalists, and TEN's highest profile newsreader, Sandra is the perfect choice for this bulletin in the largest market in the country.

Sandra Sully said: "I've enjoyed every moment of my time as anchor of TEN's Late News, having had the opportunity to break some of Australia and indeed the world's biggest news stories in that time. I'm thrilled that TEN is serious about investing in quality news programming and I welcome the opportunity to be a part of this next exciting phase."

Sandra's passion for news has cemented her position as one of the finest and most recognisable newsreaders in the country, delivering TEN's news bulletins with integrity for over 20 years.

Just recently, Sandra led Network Ten News' Royal Wedding coverage from London and was privileged to be asked to host Oprah Winfrey's star studded garden party at Sydney's Botanical Gardens ahead of her Australian adventure extravaganza.

Her extensive journalistic career is littered with highlights but perhaps none are more significant and poignant as the September 11 terror attacks. With calm and poise, Sandra was the first person to tell Australia about the tragic events unfolding before her eyes while delivering a professional news bulletin on the world's worst terrorist attack.

In a further change to the news schedule, TEN's flagship sports news brand, Sports Tonight, will also feature as part of the daily 90-minute news bulletin from October 3. In Sydney, Brad McEwan will host the weekday edition of Sports Tonight, with Rob Canning delivering Sports Tonight in the national weekend edition of Ten News at Five.

These developments, along with the recent announcement of an extended 90-minute national weekend new bulletin are part of Ten's on-going strategy to deliver audiences a comprehensive news service of the highest calibre day-in and day-out.
